HOPS AND HISTORY

American History and Folklore as remembered by American Breweries and Beers

by Jim Dent

There's more than just beer in that bottle...
there's a story about America

Boise, ID, 9/15/19 - All across the country, craft breweries are memorializing important people, places and events from American history and folklore. Thousands of breweries and beers in the U.S. today are named in remembrance of an important piece of America and many of the stories behind those names can now be found in one place - Hops and History!

Inside the pages of Hops and History, readers will find fascinating stories about important Native Americans, the Revolutionary War, America's westward expansion, military heroes, the Civil War, presidents, celebrities, scoundrels, lawmen, gunfighters, pirates, runaway elephants, supernatural roosters, mysterious creatures and much more. To be clear, this is not a book about the history of beer but is instead a collection of stories about the United States of America, all of which are inspired by American breweries and beers!

Each page of Hops and History features an American brewery, one of their beers, and a one-page narrative that tells the story behind the name of the beer. In total, 275 breweries, beers and stories are featured, including breweries from every U.S. State, and all of the stories memorialize an important part of the United States of America, often a part that is particularly close to the brewery and their corner of the country.

Hops and History is Jim Dent's first book but certainly not his last. Jim spent the majority of his professional career as a public school teacher and only recently took on the two-year-long endeavor of creating the Hops and History project. He lives in Boise, ID, still finds time to teach and greatly enjoys traveling all across the beautiful U.S.A.
